

Gustavus Adolphus College has historically demonstrated a strong commitment to recognizing and addressing diversity issues and supporting student religious, political and cultural initiatives.

For generations, the College has actively recruited students with diverse backgrounds to systematically diversify its campus. Today the community includes students from 20 countries (13 percent of whom are of color), 14 student-led multicultural programs and the Building Bridges Conference, which annually engages the community in diversity-related discussions.

Your gift to the area of diversity and multicultural programs can help grow outreach, office space and resources so Gustavus can continue to celebrate our differences and seek out common threads in a challenging and nurturing campus community.
